

making studying accessible to all, individual careers: how to rethink educational processes?

Master of Arts (MA) in sciences and practices of education

GENERAL OUTLINE

Objectives

The Master of Arts in Sciences and Practices of Education is delivered jointly by the University of Lausanne and the University of Teacher Education of the Canton of Vaud (HEP-VD). It offers a balanced combination of the professionalizing approach of the HEP Vaud and the academic approaches of the UNIL.

Moreover, this Master's course offers two possible specialisations:

- Evaluation and Management in Education
- Organizations and Transitions

Career prospects

This Master's degree offers training aiming at the acquisition of a set of qualifications, skills and experience that will enable you to:

- develop, enhance and complete your knowledge of academic and non-academic education;
- identify and describe the characteristics of the main educational systems in Switzerland and at international level;
- analyse the problems facing schools, from the learning process of students to the organisation of the school system and vocational training;
- evaluate educational policies and practices for life-long learning;

- understand the educational process from a multidisciplinary viewpoint;
- lastly, propose alternatives and innovations in the field of education, from early childhood to adulthood.

In addition to these specific skills, studies in higher education institutions allow students to acquire a great many transverse skills such as: oral and written communication, critical, analytical and summarising faculties, abilities in research, and so on.

This panoply of skills is excellent preparation for a wide range of employment opportunities such as:

- Public administration entities responsible for education and training
- Public or private organisations providing education and training
- Institutions active in the educational care of children and adolescents
- Companies with an in-house education and training programme
- Associations active in the educational field
- Research units oriented towards the field of learning and education.

Note that this Master's course is not a teaching diploma.

EDUCATIONAL CONTENT

Description

The Master of Arts in Sciences and Practices of Education offers a very wide range of courses ranging from basic disciplines (philosophy, history, sociology, economics, psychology, social psychology, anthropology, general education) to more specific subjects (management of training systems, evaluation of learning processes, family education, gender and education, life paths, adult training, ICT and education, etc).

You can choose between two degree courses:

- a Master's degree worth 90 ECTS credits
- a Master's degree worth 120 ECTS credits, with specialisation.

The degree course worth 90 ECTS credits consists of three parts: mandatory courses, free-choice courses (including the possibility of an internship) and the Master's thesis.

The degree course worth 120 ECTS includes the three parts of the course worth 90 ECTS credits and, in addition, a specialisation worth 30 ECTS. Each of the two specialisation orientations offers courses taught not only at UNIL and HEP, but also at IDHEAP (Institute of Advanced Studies in Public Administration). It includes a mandatory internship.

The Master's thesis is accompanied by compulsory methodology workshops. These workshops, designed as opportunities for reflection, propose the development of an interdisciplinary methodology specific to educational sciences.

Examinations

The evaluation of knowledge takes diverse forms, for example seminar or research work, continuous assessment, oral or written examination, internship report. Each course is validated either by a pass certificate (seminars, research seminar), or by a mark (course work and Master's dissertation). There are three exam sessions per year (winter, summer, autumn). Conditions for passing the Master's degree are described in the regulations of the Master in Sciences and Practices of Education.

Mobility

You have the possibility of completing a study semester in a HEP-Vaud partner institution. If the study programme completed under the mobility scheme is approved and sanctioned by the passing of examinations, credits acquired will be recognised and validated in your degree course.
